My wonderful Experience at the 2006 Asian Games In Doha

In December 2006, I went to Doha to participate in the 2006 Asian Games, taking part in the Beach Volleyball Championship. We prepared for a long time, training hard and fighting for approval of our participation. Nothing was easy. My partner, Clara, my coach, King, and I were aiming to get into the top 8 at the Asian Games.

Unfortunately, I sprained my ankle one week before departure, which frustrated me beyond belief. I had physiotherapy every day following the injury, and tried to recover as quickly as possible. Of course, the ankle could not heal completely in a few days, so I had no choice but to just try my best and have my ankle taped when I played in matches.

We played against teams from Thailand, Mongolia, and Malaysia. The most difficult and important match was that against the Malaysian team. We planned well for the match and tried our very best. Breaking and Entering as an unusual film. Will and Sandy are two architects working on a major urban renewal project in the King's Cross section in London. The area is unsafe and ready for such a project. Will and Sandy move their offices into a nearby vacant warehouse.

Will has to deal with constant burglaries at his new office. One night, he saw Miro trying to break into the building. He chased Miro to his run down apartment block and watched him return home to his mother. Amira, a Bosnian immigrant who makes a living tailoring clothes. Soon, Will 'meet' Amira and they begin an affair. And Amira learns that Will holds the key of her son's future. How far will this mother go to protect her son?

Breaking and Entering is a very interesting film, but it is almost entirely character driven. This is not a bad thing although in the film we are exposed to a story or action driven.

Boxing - sport Of spectacle?

Boxing, amongst other hand-to-hand fighting, has been with us for thousands of years. Originally it was nothing more than bare fist fighting between two willing, and sometimes unwilling competitors for the entertainment of others. Some people argue that it is a relatively safe, disciplined, highly skilled, and technical sport that brings enjoyment and employment to a great many people. Others claim that it is a dangerous and barbaric spectacle that has no place in the civilized world. This article will explore each sides claim an more detail. It will talk about the damage that can be inflicted when two men to stand face-to-face with the sole intention of knocking each other out with their fists. It will go on to argue that boxing, or legitimate assault, has no place in the twenty first century.

The bell goes and the two warriors approach each other . They are quick. They are strong. They are hard. They are ready to hurt and be hurt.

A left fist launches and connects with a nose. The crowds are on their feet. Cheering. Wanting more. Wanting blood.

So, boxing; what's it all about? All animals, mostly the males fight from time to time. Sometimes it's playing but at other times it's serious. Lots of people, including me, enjoy watching boxing. It is disgusting at times tough, especially when there's lots of blood and some boxers died in the ring.

In conclusion, both sides of the debate have solid foundations. As has been shown, the argument for and against have been put forward since boxing began And It would seem, the argument will continue for at least the foreseeable future, as compromise seem unlikely. The following text is for question 30-31

An aurora is a natural light display in the sky particularly in the high latitude (Arctic and Antarctic) regions, caused by the collisions of energetic charged particles with atoms in the high altitude atmosphere (thermosphere). The charged particles originate in the magnetosphere and solar wind are directed by the Earth's magnetic field into the atmosphere. Most aurora occur in a band known as the aurora zone which is typically 3° to 6° in latitudinal extent and at all local times or longitudes.

Aurora is classified as diffuse or discrete aurora. The diffuse aurora is a featureless glow in the sky which may not be visible to the naked eye even in a dark night and defines the extent of the aurora zone. Discrete aurora are sharply defined features within the diffuse aurora which vary in brightness from just barely visible to the naked eye to bright enough to read a newspaper at night. Discrete aurora are usually observed only in the night sky because they are not as bright as the sunlit sky.

In northern latitudes, the effect is known as the aurora borealis (or the northern lights), named after the Roman goddess of dawn, Aurora, and the Greek name for the north wind, Boreas, by Pierre Gassendi in 1621. Its southern counterpart, the aurora Australis (or the southern lights), has almost identical features to the aurora borealis and changes simultaneously with the changes in the northern aurora zone and is visible from high southern latitudes in Antarctica, South America and Australia.

30. What is the main idea of paragraph 2?

- (A) The diffuse aurora is a featureless glow in the sky
- (B) The discrete aurora are sharply defined features within the diffuse aurora
- (C) There are two kinds of aurora, diffuse and discrete aurora
- (D) Discrete aurora are usually observed only in the night sky
- (E) Discrete aurora are not as bright as the sunlit sky.

- (A) An aurora is very beautiful
- (B) Aurora can be seen in the North and South Poles
- (C) Aurora is named after Roman god
- (D) Diffuse aurora is sharply defined
